Welcome to DFCU Financial

Learn How Your Money Is Insured

Now that you're officially a member of DFCU Financial—a full service credit union—your funds are now insured by the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) instead of the FDIC, up to the same amount as before, $250,000.

What's the difference between FDIC and NCUA?

Not much really: the FDIC insures your funds in a bank, while the NCUA insures credit union accounts. For more details, including a chart outlining the specific differences between FDIC and NCUA insurance, please visit the Welcome Hub at DFCUFinancial.com.
